

THE BRAND MANUAL

Breathe Life Healing Centers

A place built by people who've been there, for people who are ready to breathe again.

CONTENTS

Sections 01–04 are the thinking.
05–10 are the system. 11–17 are how it gets used, said, and shipped.

01 The core idea

03 The six differences

05 The logo

07 Typography

09 Photography

11 Voice & tone

13 Digital UI kit

15 Accessibility standards

17 Governance & open questions

02 Who we are, who we serve

04 Brand attributes

06 Color

08 The breath system: layout

10 Graphic elements

12 Copy library

14 Applications

16 What to avoid

01

The core idea

Breathing is the one thing addiction takes from you without you noticing – until the day you notice you haven't taken a full breath in years.

The name isn't a metaphor bolted onto a treatment center after the fact. It's the literal, physical truth of what recovery gives back first: the ability to breathe — fully, without bracing, without hiding, without holding it in. Before insight. Before the twelfth step. Before any of it.

That's the creative territory. Not "journey." Not "healing light." Breath — held, released, shared. The pause before someone tells the truth for the first time. The exhale after a phone call that took three weeks to make. The first full breath in a body that finally feels like home.

THE ONE-LINE TEST

If a layout, a headline, or a photograph doesn't help someone take a fuller breath, it isn't ours. Ask it of every piece before it ships.

02

Who we are, who we serve

THE ORGANIZATION

A Los Angeles-based residential, PHP, and IOP program built for the LGBTQ+ community first — with doors open to anyone whose values align with how the place actually operates.

Every person on staff, from the front desk to clinical leadership, has personal recovery experience. The CEO, Beck Guy, is a trans man in recovery himself. This isn't a marketing claim, it's a hiring standard, and it holds all the way down to whoever picks up the phone.

This is not a place where someone read about the experience and decided to help. It's a place built by the people who lived it, for the people living it now. Every design decision should sound like a peer, never like an institution explaining itself.

WHO WE SERVE — IN THIS ORDER, WITHOUT APOLOGY

The community comes first. Everyone else is invited in, not accommodated around the edges. In practice that means representation in imagery, examples, and copy defaults to the community — and never reads as a straight brand that also welcomes queer people.

These aren't a bulleted feature list for a brochure. Each one is a real, felt difference — treat them that way in the work. Each carries a design cue: the thing it should change about how a page looks or reads.

01

Lived experience, at every level

Nobody here is being treated by someone who studied their experience from the outside. The person checking you in has been where you are.

DESIGN CUE

Warmth that comes from familiarity, not performance. Peer, not authority.

02

Chemsex & sexualized drug use, as its own real thing

Crystal meth, GHB, mephedrone, used in sexual contexts — an underaddressed clinical issue in gay and queer men's communities, treated here as exactly that. Not a moral failing. Not a variant of sex addiction.

DESIGN CUE

Name it plainly on the page. No euphemism, no shame-coded imagery, no softening typography.

03

Sexual health as part of care, not apart from it

STI testing, HIV status support, hormone continuity, PrEP-aware language. Sexuality is treated as neutral and normal — worth addressing honestly, never as a liability to manage around.

DESIGN CUE

These services sit in the main services grid, at the same weight — never in a discreet sub-page.

04

Gender-affirming care woven through everything

Correct names, correct pronouns, gender-appropriate facilities, clinical staff trained in the minority stress model — not a specialty add-on, the default.

DESIGN CUE

Every form, every field, every caption assumes chosen name and pronouns exist. Build them in, don't bolt them on.

05

Chosen family, in family therapy

Family therapy here doesn't assume blood relationships. Partners, chosen family, and community are valid participants in the family system — a practical reality for people whose biological families are often absent, harmful, or estranged.

DESIGN CUE

Never a nuclear-family photograph. Never "your loved ones back home" as the default phrase.

06

Systemic barriers, as real clinical material

Religious trauma, minority stress, discrimination, collective grief — including AIDS-crisis grief — held with the same clinical weight as any other presenting issue, not treated as background noise.

DESIGN CUE

History is allowed on the page. Grief is allowed on the page. Neither gets a soft-focus filter.

04

Brand attributes

Five dials. Each one is a tension, not a value — the brand lives at a specific point between two failure modes.

Steady, not soft

← sentimental · cold →

The register of someone who has rehearsed a sentence for weeks and is finally saying it out loud: tired, precise, quietly hopeful. Nothing dramatic. Nothing breathless.

Warm, not sentimental

← saccharine · sterile →

Warmth arrives through paper tones, real faces, and plain sentences — not through script fonts, soft gradients, or a hand on a shoulder.

Direct, not blunt

← euphemistic · clinical-cold →

"Methamphetamine use related to sex" is how a caller said it. That's the level of directness the brand carries — the plain word, said kindly, without flinching.

Peer, not authority

← chummy · institutional →

We don't over-explain queer culture to a straight audience. We assume the reader already knows what we're talking about — and we're never impressed with ourselves for knowing it.

Clinically serious & fully seeing

← wellness-vague · hospital-grey →

Both things are true at once: a serious clinical program, and the first room where some people have ever felt fully seen. The visual language has to hold both without collapsing into either.

The logo

One primary lockup: a brush-script "Breathe" over a wide-tracked "Life Healing Centers." The script carries the exhale; the sans underneath keeps it clinical. Neither half works alone in external use.

PRIMARY LOCKUP

#33679C ON WHITE

clear space = height of the "B" ascender, all four sides

CLEAR SPACE

1 × B-HEIGHT MINIMUM

MINIMUM SIZES

- Digital: 160 px wide
- Print: 1.25 in / 32 mm wide
- Favicon / avatar: use the "B" mark only
- Never below these — the tagline closes up

APPROVED VARIANTS

- Primary — blue on white / paper
- Reversed — white knockout on Deep Still
- One-color — 100% black or 100% white
- Mark only — "B" for avatars, favicons, stamps

FILE FORMATS TO HOLD

- SVG — all web and UI use
- EPS — print and vendors
- PNG w/ transparency — decks, docs
- Never a JPG on a colored background

MASTER FILES — ON HAND

Vector masters are now in the library: a primary blue SVG and a white knockout SVG. Everything in this section is drawn from those files. Still to produce: EPS for print vendors, a transparent PNG set for decks, and a one-color version.

BACKGROUNDS

The logo features the word "Breathe" in a large, elegant script font, with "Life Healing Centers" in a smaller, clean sans-serif font underneath.

✓ White — preferred

The logo is centered on a solid light beige background.

✓ Paper — preferred

The logo is centered on a solid dark navy background.

✓ Deep Still —
white knockout

The text "blue logo on Sea Glass — fails contrast" is centered on a solid teal background.

× Never on Sea Glass

The text "busy photograph" is centered on a background of diagonal grey and white stripes.

× Not without a scrim

MISUSE — ALL OF THESE ARE WRONG

× Stretched or condensed

× Recolored off-palette

× Rotated or arced

× Shadows, glows, bevels

× Crowded clear space

Breathe

× Re-typeset in another face

06

Color

The palette is built off the one true asset we already have: the blue in the wordmark, sampled and confirmed at #33679C. Everything else is derived — deeper for ground, lighter for air, and one approved alternative tone — a muted sea green that carries the human half of the brand without touching rainbow tokenism.

CORE — BLUES

Deep Still

Ground, night, gravity. Full-bleed sections, footers, cover.

HEX #16293D
RGB 22 41 61
CMYK 88 70 45 40
PMS 2379 C (match)

Breathe Blue

The logo blue. Primary interactive color, rules, links, key type.

HEX #33679C
RGB 51 103 156
CMYK 82 57 15 1
PMS 7692 C (match)

Held Blue

Secondary type on dark, charts, quiet emphasis, hover states.

HEX #6E9AC4
RGB 110 154 196
CMYK 57 31 6 0
PMS 543 C (match)

Air

Panels, callouts, selection, the pale field behind a held breath.

HEX #C8DAE9
RGB 200 218 233
CMYK 21 8 3 0
PMS 545 C (match)

ALTERNATIVE TONE & NEUTRALS

Sea Glass

The approved alternative tone and the only accent. Rules, markers, fills, and 24px+ type. Never more than ~5% of a composition. Two contrast steps carry small text: Deep #2C5A64 on light, Light #7FB3BC on Deep Still.

HEX #478694
RGB 71 134 148
CMYK 74 33 36 4
PMS 5483 C (match)
Deep step #2C5A64 · Light step #7FB3BC

Ink

Body copy on light. Softer than pure black; never use #000 for text.

HEX #14181C
RGB 20 24 28
CMYK 75 65 60 70
Supporting: Slate #4A555F,
Mist #D9DEE3

Sand

Warm neutral field. Print backgrounds, admissions collateral, quote blocks.

HEX #E8D9C9
RGB 232 217 201
CMYK 8 12 20 0
PMS 9184 C (match)

Paper

The default background everywhere. Warm enough to feel like a room, not a screen.

HEX #F7F5F1
RGB 247 245 241
CMYK 2 2 4 0
Uncoated stock preferred

60% Paper

18% Deep

12% Blue 6% 4%

Most of any surface is empty warm ground. Blue does the work; Sea Glass is a single point of heat. If a layout reads as "a lot of blue," it's wrong.

Ink on Paper

16.9:1 AAA

Breathe Blue on Paper

5.4:1 AA

White on Breathe Blue

6.0:1 AA

Air-tinted text on Deep Still

12.4:1 AAA

Sea Glass on white — 24px+, rules, fills

4.1:1 AA large

Deep Sea Glass on Paper — all small text

7.3:1 AAA

Light Sea Glass on Deep Still

6.3:1 AA

Blue on Deep Still — never

2.4:1 ×

07

Typography

A peer's handwriting made legible, not a hospital's letterhead. Two voices and one utility: a humanist sans that carries the plain talk, a literary serif reserved for the moments when a real person is speaking, and a mono for anything factual — labels, data, phone numbers, legal.

Aa

Instrument Sans

400 · 500 · 600 · italics

Everything structural: headlines, subheads, body, buttons, navigation. Unpretentious, slightly warm, never corporate.

Fallback: Helvetica Neue, Arial, sans-serif

Aa

Newsreader

300 · 400 · italic 300

Reserved. Pull quotes, the words of real callers and clients, and one statement per page at most. Its job is to signal: a human being said this.

Fallback: Georgia, 'Times New Roman', serif

Aa

IBM Plex Mono

400 · 500 · uppercase, tracked

Facts and wayfinding: section labels, phone numbers, dates, insurance details, accreditation lines, form hints.

Fallback: ui-monospace, 'SF Mono', monospace

THE SCALE

Display
96 / 0.94 / -0.035em
Instrument Sans 600

Breathe again

H1
56 / 1.05 / -0.03em
Instrument Sans 600

Treatment built by people who've been there

H2

36 / 1.15 / -0.02em

Instrument Sans 600

Residential, PHP, and IOP in Los Angeles

Statement

30 / 1.35 / Newsreader 300

"He's at the first step of a potentially life-changing journey."

Body

17 / 1.65

Instrument Sans 400

Every person on staff, from the front desk to clinical leadership, has personal recovery experience. Measure line length at 60–75 characters and never justify text — ragged right keeps the rhythm of speech.

Small

15 / 1.6

Captions, card copy, secondary detail, form help text.

Label

11 / 0.16em / caps

IBM Plex Mono 400

ADMISSIONS · OPEN 24 HOURS · (323) 000-0000

ALWAYS

- Sentence case in headlines. We're talking, not announcing.
- Serif only for words a person actually said.
- 60–75 characters per line, ragged right.
- Tighten tracking as size goes up, never the reverse.
- 16px minimum on web, 12pt minimum in print.

NEVER

- ALL CAPS for a full sentence — it reads as instruction.
- Script or handwriting fonts anywhere. The logo already did that.
- Italic sans for emphasis; use weight instead.
- Centered body copy, or text over busy photography without a scrim.
- Serif and mono in the same headline.

08

The breath system

Breath is compositional logic, not iconography. No lungs, no wind swirls, no vapor. It shows up as rhythm: every page builds, holds, and releases — then leaves the room quiet.

BUILD

Top of the page: short label, then headline, then one line of context. Ascending scale, tightening spacing. Never more than three elements before the hold.

HOLD

The one thing that matters: a photograph, a quote, an offer to call. Given more room than feels comfortable. This is where the negative space earns its keep.

RELEASE

Detail, proof, practical information — descending in weight. The page ends quietly with the phone number, never with a shout.

THE HORIZON

A single 1px rule with one marker on it — the one recurring graphic device. Use it to divide, never to decorate. Maximum one per screen.

GRID & SPACING

- 12 columns, 24px gutters, 64px page margins (24px on mobile).
 - Spacing steps: 8 · 16 · 24 · 32 · 48 · 64 · 96 · 144.
 - Text columns max 720px. Never full-width paragraphs.
 - Corner radius: 0 for panels and images, 999px only for pills.
- Nothing in between.

THE NEGATIVE-SPACE RULE

- At least 30% of any hero composition stays empty.
- One idea per screen. If two compete, split the screen.
- Asymmetry over centering — the eye should move, then rest.
- When in doubt, remove something and add space.

Photography

Real people, real diversity of gender expression and body type — not stock-photo diversity, not posed "recovery journey" triumph shots. Candid warmth. Actual West Hollywood light. Every image should look like it was taken by someone who was allowed to be in the room.

PORTRAIT — a resident, mid-sentence, not smiling for the camera. Available light.

Faces at rest. Eye contact optional. The moment just before or just after the thing worth photographing.

SPACE — an open window, a doorway, morning light crossing an empty room.

Rooms without people carry the breath motif better than any symbol. Horizon lines, thresholds, air.

TOGETHERNESS — two or three people talking, one listening.
Chosen family, not a circle.

Small groups, uneven attention, real posture. Nobody arranged.
Nobody performing recovery.

Placeholders above — drop approved photography into these slots at the same crops.

DETAIL — hands, a coffee cup,
a name written on a whiteboard,
LA light on a wall.

Texture between the portraits. Specific, ordinary, unstaged. These carry the "actual place" claim.

SHOOT FOR

- Natural light, mid-morning or late afternoon
- Full range of gender expression and body type, uncommented on
- Slightly wide framing — room to breathe around the subject
- Neutral, warm color grade; no heavy filters, no teal-and-orange
- Consent-first: model releases and the right to withdraw, always

NEVER SHOOT, NEVER LICENSE

- The single tear. The silhouette at sunset.
- The group-therapy circle holding hands.
- Hands reaching toward light, sunrise-over-water, open road.
- Stock "sad addict" imagery — bottles, pills, head in hands.
- Rainbow flags standing in for actual representation.
- Faces cropped out to imply shame.

Graphic elements

A deliberately small kit. Four devices, used consistently, do more for recognition than a library of illustrations — and they keep the system honest when there's no budget for a shoot.

The horizon rule

1px Breathe Blue, one Sea Glass marker off-center. Section dividers, letterhead, the top of every template.

The breath meter

In–hold–out as a bar rhythm. Use for progress, program phases, and data. Never animate it faster than a real breath (4s in, 4s out).

Concentric rings

Expansion and release. Levels of care, circles of chosen family, the "you at the center" diagram. Never more than three rings.

The open corner

Panels are bracketed on two sides, never boxed in. A frame that's still open — the visual note this whole brand runs on.

ICONOGRAPHY

1.5px stroke, round caps, 24px grid, no fills, no color inside the icon. Icons label things — services, levels of care, contact methods — and never illustrate feelings.

Banned: lungs, wind swirls, butterflies, lotus flowers, sunrises, broken chains, puzzle pieces, hands holding hearts.

MOTION

Everything moves on a breath curve: cubic-bezier(.4,0,.2,1), 400–600ms, generous. No bounce, no spring, no parallax.

Fade and rise 8px. That's the whole vocabulary. Honor prefers `reduced-motion` by removing movement entirely, not by shortening it.

11

Voice & tone

The written voice belongs to Beck Guy: peer-informed, direct, warm, clinically grounded. He speaks like someone who's been in the room, not someone who read about the room. He doesn't over-explain queer culture for a straight audience — he assumes the reader already knows what he's talking about.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS — FROM REAL INTAKE CALLS, IDENTIFYING DETAILS REMOVED

"He's at the first step of a potentially life-changing journey."

Admissions summary – a caller reaching out for the first time

"Referred to Breathe Life for their experience supporting patients in the LGBT community."

Admissions summary – caller seeking treatment for a 14–15 year methamphetamine addiction

"The need to find treatment arose urgently in the past 24-48 hours."

Admissions summary – caller referred by his drug counselor

"Seeking residential placement for her adult child's partner."

Admissions summary – a family member calling on someone else's behalf

What's consistent across hundreds of these calls: people rarely call in crisis language. They call sounding tired, precise, and quietly hopeful — like someone who has rehearsed the sentence in their head for weeks and is finally saying it out loud. That tone — steady, not dramatic — is the real emotional register of this brand. Match it. Never out-dramatize the person you're writing to.

ALWAYS

- People-first, identity-affirming language
- Modern community language where it fits naturally — chosen family, gender-affirming, queer
- Sexuality framed as neutral and normal, worth discussing honestly
- Systemic barriers acknowledged as real and clinically relevant
- Plain words for hard things, said without flinching

NEVER

- The word "lifestyle" to describe being LGBTQ+
- Heteronormative assumptions — partners, family, anyone
- Leading with or moralizing about the abstinence-based policy
- Clinical jargon standing in for human language
- Conflating sexualized drug use with sex addiction

REWRITES — THE SAME SENTENCE, WRONG AND RIGHT

× OFF-BRAND

"We support clients struggling with an alternative lifestyle."

✓ ON-BRAND

"We're a queer treatment center. Most of us are in recovery ourselves."

× OFF-BRAND

"Treatment for compulsive sexual behaviors and related substance issues."

✓ ON-BRAND

"Meth, GHB, and mephedrone used in sexual contexts — treated as its own thing, not as sex addiction."

× OFF-BRAND

"Bring your loved ones home to a family that's waiting for you."

✓ ON-BRAND

"Family therapy here includes partners, chosen family, and the people who actually show up."

× OFF-BRAND

"Our zero-tolerance abstinence policy holds clients accountable from day one."

✓ ON-BRAND

"This is an abstinence-based program. We'll walk you through exactly what that means before you decide."

× OFF-BRAND

"Begin your transformational healing journey toward your best self."

✓ ON-BRAND

"Call when you're ready. Someone who's been where you are will pick up."

12

Copy library

Approved lines, ready to use. Take them verbatim before writing new ones — consistency matters more than novelty, and every line here has already been checked against the voice rules.

HEADLINES

Breathe again.

Built by people who've been there.

The first full breath is the whole point.

Queer-first treatment in Los Angeles.

Nobody here is guessing what this is like.

CALLS TO ACTION

Call admissions — the default, always first

Talk to someone in recovery — warm variant

Ask us anything first — low-commitment variant

Check your coverage — practical variant

× Never: "Get started today," "Claim your spot," countdowns, urgency framing.

BOILERPLATE — 40 WORDS

Breathe Life Healing Centers is a Los Angeles residential, PHP, and IOP program built for the LGBTQ+ community first. Every person on staff has personal recovery experience — including our CEO. Doors open to anyone whose values align.

15 WORDS

A queer-first treatment center in Los Angeles, staffed entirely by people in recovery themselves.

A real intake note referenced a 19-year-old client "legally named Hannah but currently called Noah" — recorded and used correctly, without comment, in a routine administrative summary. That's the brand living in a place nobody was performing for. Every system we design has to make that the path of least resistance.

- Chosen name is the display name, everywhere. Legal name appears only where insurance or law requires it, in one clearly-labelled field.
- Pronouns are a free-text field, not a dropdown of three.
- No field, badge, or chart ever surfaces a name the person doesn't use.
- Never comment on, congratulate, or explain any of this in copy. It's just how it works.

Use

chosen family gender-affirming queer person in recovery
substance use sexualized drug use partner abstinence-based

Avoid

lifestyle preference alternative addict / abuser
clean vs. dirty
sex addiction
husband/wife by default zero tolerance

Digital UI kit

The components someone in a hard moment will actually touch. Big targets, obvious labels, no dark patterns, nothing that makes a person feel handled.

BUTTONS — 52PX TALL, 0 RADIUS

Call admissions

Check your coverage

Talk to someone now

Text link, underlined on rest

One Sea Glass button per screen, maximum — filled with the Deep step so white label type clears AA. Focus ring: 2px Deep Sea Glass, 2px offset, never removed.

FORM FIELDS

Name you go by

What we'll call you

Pronouns

Anything you like

Legal name — insurance only

Only if it's different

Chosen name first, always. Never a required gender dropdown.

PERSISTENT CALL BAR

ADMISSIONS • OPEN 24 HOURS

(323) 000-0000

Call now

Fixed to the bottom on mobile, in the header on desktop. The phone number is never more than one scroll away — most people who reach us call within minutes of landing.

PRIVACY NOTE PATTERN

"Nothing you tell us goes anywhere else. You can call without giving your name."

Touch targets: 44px minimum, 52px for anything on the admissions path. No modal traps, no chat pop-ups that open on their own, no exit-intent overlays — ever.

14

Applications

The system, assembled. Build–hold–release in each one, one accent, one idea, and the phone number somewhere it can be found without hunting.

WEBSITE HERO

Programs

Who we serve

Our team

Admissions

(323) 000-0000

Breathe again.

A queer-first treatment center where everyone on staff has been where you are.

Call admissions

Ask us anything first

HERO IMAGE — an open window in a residence, late-morning LA light.
No people, or one person turned away.

Beck Guy

Chief Executive Officer · he/him

(323) 000-0000

beck@breathelifehealing.com

West Hollywood, CA

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

"I have brought LGBTQ clients and straight or cisgender clients and both are welcomed equally."

Stephen Timmer
interventionist · Google review

What happens when you call

- 01 Someone in recovery picks up. No script.
- 02 We ask what's going on, in your words.
- 03 We check coverage while you're on the phone.
- 04 If we're not the right fit, we say so and refer you.

ADMISSIONS • 24 HOURS

(323) 000-0000

EMAIL SIGNATURE

Beck Guy (he/him)

Chief Executive Officer, Breathe Life Healing Centers

(323) 000-0000 • breathelifehealing.com

West Hollywood, California

Text only — no logo image, no quotes, no confidentiality wall of text.
Pronouns on every signature, at every level.

INTERIOR SIGNAGE & WAYFINDING

SECOND FLOOR

Group room • All-gender restroom

All-gender facilities are labelled plainly and listed alongside everything else — never signposted as an accommodation.

Breathe
again.

Wordmark or one line of type, never both. Nothing anyone would be embarrassed to wear outside the building — no program names, no recovery slogans, no dates.

15

Accessibility & inclusive standards

Non-negotiable. A brand that says everyone is welcome and then ships a form that misgenders them has said nothing.

CONTRAST & TYPE

- WCAG 2.2 AA minimum, AAA for body copy where possible
- Sea Glass #478694 is for rules, fills, and 24px+ type only — small text uses Deep #2C5A64 on light or Light #7FB3BC on Deep Still
- 16px minimum body size, no exceptions for "design reasons"
- Layouts survive 200% zoom and 400% text scaling

INTERACTION

- Visible focus ring on everything focusable — 2px Sea Glass
- Full keyboard path to the phone number from any page
- Never color alone to carry meaning
- Respect `prefers-reduced-motion` by removing motion

INCLUSIVE BY CONSTRUCTION

- Chosen name and pronouns in every system that stores a person
- Alt text describes people as they'd describe themselves — never guessing gender
- Reading level: plain, around grade 8, without talking down
- Spanish-language parity on admissions pages

PRIVACY & SAFETY

- No tracking pixels on pages about HIV status, chemsex, or gender care
- Nothing that could out someone in a browser tab title or email subject
- Testimonials with explicit, revocable consent only
- Crisis resources reachable in one tap from every page

16

What to avoid

Six ways this brand goes wrong. Each one is a real failure mode for a treatment center — and the reason a rule earlier in this document exists.

Rainbow-flag tokenism

A flag in the corner instead of actual representation in the photography, the staff page, and the copy. If the flag is doing the work, the work isn't done.

Sad-addict / triumphant-recovery stock

Both are lies about what this is like. Nobody in these photographs has ever made a phone call at 2am.

Sterile clinical-hospital aesthetic

Cold greys, stock-blue gradients, an institution reassuring itself. This is a residence in Los Angeles, not a ward.

Wellness-spa softness

Pastel washes, lotus icons, breathy lowercase type. It erases the real clinical seriousness — and reads as a yoga app.

Punitive, shame-coded language

Hard-edged red, warning iconography, moralizing around the abstinence policy. Explain the policy plainly; never brandish it.

Heteronormative family framing

Blood-relative-only imagery, "your husband or wife," a nuclear family on the family-program page. Chosen family is the default here.

17

Governance & open questions

What this document doesn't decide yet, and who decides it. Two of these block work that's already in motion.

BLOCKING

Founder attribution in public reviews

Several older Google reviews — including a business-owner reply signed "– Brad Lamm" from two years ago — center Brad Lamm as founder/owner. That's in tension with Beck Guy as the named CEO and with the decision to remove the Brad Lamm bio page. Any reviews strategy needs an explicit answer before those reviews get surfaced in marketing. Owner: leadership, not design.

RESOLVED

Vector logo master

Primary blue and white-knockout SVG masters received and in use throughout this manual. Remaining: EPS for print vendors, a transparent PNG set, and a one-color version.

OPEN

Photography commission

Every photographic placeholder in this manual is waiting on one shoot. Until it happens, use paper, type, and the horizon rule — never stock.

OPEN

Type licensing & PMS confirmation

All three typefaces are open-licensed (SIL OFL) — free for web and print, no seat fees. Pantone matches listed in §06 are visual approximations; confirm on press with a physical book before the first signage run.

HOW TO USE THIS MANUAL

Sections 01–04 before you sketch. 05–10 while you build. 11–12 before anything gets written. 15 before anything ships. If a rule here blocks something genuinely better, bring the work — the manual updates.

REVIEW CADENCE

Quarterly read-through with clinical leadership and one person in current treatment. Language moves; this document has to move with it. Version and date every change on the cover.

FINAL APPROVAL

Voice and clinical claims: Beck Guy, CEO. Visual system: design lead. Anything touching client identity, privacy, or consent: clinical leadership, no exceptions.

From public Google reviews — real names, real ratings, unprompted. This is the brand already working, independent of anything written for it. The pattern that matters for design: nobody writes about amenities. They write about being believed.

"They were patient enough with me... most of the staff are extremely empathetic towards everyone, not just people within the LGBTQ community."

Zahara Nakia R. · Google review

"Breathe Life Healing Center was the only treatment center that said they would do this — treat my family member's eating disorder and alcoholism simultaneously."

Babbi Anderson · Google review, on a family member's treatment

"I was able to process my trauma from issues I faced growing up as a gay boy in the 1980's... The trauma and shame that I grew up with fueled my lack of self worth."

Matt Berg · Google review

A place built by people who've
been there, for people who are ready to breathe again — not someday, not eventually, but starting the moment they pick up the phone.

BRAND MANUAL · EDITION 01 · 2026

INTERNAL & PARTNER USE — NOT FOR PUBLIC DISTRIBUTION